ODOR MANAGEMENT

Customers and employees can be either positively or negatively impacted by the scents and odors in your facility. Smart organizations know that clean, fresh-smelling air and a proactive odor management program can reap many benefits:

- Healthier working environment
- Better indoor air quality
- More productive, motivated employees
- Positive customer purchase behavior

Follow these steps and you'll be on your way to improving the overall air quality in your facility.

Prevent odor-causing events.

Pay special attention to restrooms as they account for 95% of all odor complaints. Prevent urine from splashing onto floors and walls with screens (pp. 8-9) and urinal mats (p. 7). Prevent smelly drain clogs in your facility by keeping drains free flowing with openers and enzymatic drain maintainers (p. 11).

Eliminate the source of odors.

Remove solid soils first with good quality cleaning products. Then eliminate residual bacteria-causing odors in restrooms with products like urine removers (p. 10), grout and tile cleaners (p. 10), disinfectants that kill bacteria (p. 11) and enzymatic products that digest bacteria (p. 11).

Deodorize.

Deodorizers “neutralize” odor molecules in the air, so air smells cleaner and fresher. Deodorizers (pp. 4-9) can be used in restrooms/urinals/toilets, in common rooms and lobbies, for trash collection areas, in gyms and locker rooms, or any area where odors are problematic.

Freshen Air.

Air fresheners disperse pleasant fragrances into the air, causing positive emotions for those in a building. Air fresheners can be metered (pp. 5-6), passive (pp. 4, 5, 7), or battery powered (pp. 4-6). Fragrances used to freshen air come in several scent families including floral, fruity, spicy and clean. Use the Fragrance Chart on the opposite page to help you choose the type and fragrance of air freshener that's best for your facility.

FRAGRANCE CHART

Deodorizers and air fresheners are products that make the air smell better. There are many fragrance options for air fresheners from subtle to intense. From fruity notes like Mango to the fresh clean scent of Ocean Mist, choose your fragrance below based on the style and intensity you prefer. You may want to consider changing fragrances occasionally to avoid “fragrance fatigue.”
